A force for positive change in the design / construction industry

11/03/2017 – 4thQ CIRT Sentiment Index Declines to the Lowest Rate in 2017

Continuing a year-long trend, the overall CIRT Sentiment Index for the fourth quarter declined to 54.8, down some 2.3 points from 57.1 in the third quarter. The index leaped at the start of the year, but has seen three straight quarterly declines since as the year proceeded. Of note, the survey was taken among the CIRT members, before the government reported two quarters in a row with 3.0 percent GDP growth. See, [CIRT Sentiment Index, 4th/Qtr.]
